REIGN AT CLEVELAND

Acres Burned Over at a Loss of $3,000,000.

Consisting Chiefly of Lumber Yards and Manufacturing Establishments—Assistance Called for from Neighboring Towns.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 9.—At 7 o'clock Sunday evening a spark from a tug was borne by a breath of wind over the banks of the Cuyahoga and dropped in a pile of shavings in Woods Perry & Co.'s great lumber yard. Soon a faint blue smoke curled lazily up from the pile. A teaspoonful of water would then have put out the smoldering fire. It cost the invested capital of Cleveland two and a half million dollars before it was finally extinguished.

The fire was not discovered and an alarm turned in till a fatal quarter of an hour had placidly ticked itself away. When, finally, the whole force of the city's fire department was summoned, the flames were roaring and sending up flaming, smoking torches from a core of fire 200 feet square. Borne on the wind over the heads of the firemen, the blazing brands were dropped at random on the acres of piled lumber in that great yard, and here and there a new center of fire was started in the board piles, which, dried in the sun of a ten week's drought, were little else than stacked tinder. The firemen stood like heroes in the narrow alleys between the blazing piles of lumber. Fire was in front of them, fire to the right and left, and even fire in the rear of them. Every few seconds they were wet down to enable them to hold their post in the roaring hell of flames.

Meantime Akron, Youngstown, Painesville, Erie, Sandusky and Toledo were asked for assistance. The whole population of the city seemingly turned out to see the awful conflagration. At half-past 10 Carr street was impassable. Great efforts were made to save the Variety Iron Works, but in vain. A hundred men wet it down continually so long as the fire faced it. A dozen incipient fires started by brands and by contiguous heat were thus put out. But when the fire pushed past and flanked it on both sides, the futile effort was given over, and the noble building relinquished a prey to the flames. The N. Y. P. & O. freight depot, King & Clint, lumber: Davidson & House, Potter & Birdsell, lumber, were successively conquered and reduced to ashes. It was 10 when in spite of all endeavors of the firemen, the conflagration leaped the river and swept up both sides. Stanley's candle factory made a furious center of fire. Sherman, Williams & Co.'s varnish works made another white core in the ten acres of flame. Dirty water clogging the engines, hindered greatly the work of fighting the flames. One engine actually had to stop for repairs in the very midst of the fight. Toledo's gift of four engines came in time to help our exhausted department, and other cities responded nobly. Three engines, cut off by the flames, were rolled into the river to save them. A general alarm was rung at midnight, and the militia called out to assist the police in preserving order and protecting property.

The largest losses are Woods, Perry & Co., $700,000; King & Clint, $100,000; Davidson & House, $40,000; Potter & Birdsell, $15,000; Variety Iron Works, $40,000; Rhodes & Co., $25,000.

There were many narrow escapes, and at least two firemen at the N. Y. P. & O. depot were overcome with the heat. They rolled off the roof, and one suffered a broken leg. At 2 o'clock this morning the fire was under control.

The entire loss will probably not exceed $2,500,000, pretty well covered by insurance. Many acres of glittering coals will light up the sky above Cleveland for many days to come.

Another Account.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 9.—At 2:30 a. m. engines arrived from Erie, Toledo, Youngstown, Akron, Columbus, Sandusky, Elyria, Painesville and Norwalk, and although the accompanying firemen were strangers, they conducted themselves admirably, and received many congratulations on their work. The Western Union Telegraph Company was badly crippled, owing to the burning of their wires along the Bee Line tracks. A large number of firemen were injured but nothing yet is learned as to the extent of their injuries. Men who lost by the fire are so excited that it is almost impossible to get even a guess from them as to the extent of their losses.

Figures as near as can be obtained are: Woods, Perry & Co., $740,000; Potter, Birdsell & Co., $150,000; King & Co., $100,000.

Variety Iron Works (estimated), $35,000; Eynon & Son (estimated), $5,000; Hubbell & Weston, $25,000; New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio Railroad, $500.

House & Davidson, $50,000; G. C. Stanley estate, $10,000; Sherwin, Williams & Co., $1,000.

Railroad cars and other property destroyed is not included in the list, but it is understood to be very heavy.

INSURANCE.

Potter, Birdsell & Co. are insured in different companies to the amount of $57,500. G. C. King & Co., by different companies, $20,000.

House & Davidson, $40,000; Hubbell & Weston, $25,000; Woods, Perry & Co., (estimated) $200,000; Variety Iron Works, (estimated) $3,000.

At 10 o'clock, when the fire was at its height, the scene was grand, the fire being surrounded on all sides by hills, making the view magnificent, the flames covering nearly fifty acres. When the fire crossed the river, west of Seneca street, it looked as though the portion of the city situated between the burning district and the lake, including the greater part of the business portion, was doomed, but a strong lake breeze came up and changed its course.

W. A. Heinsolin states that he was on the roof of the Stanley Iron Works when the roof fell in and that a man was carried down with it and perished in the flames. Heinsolin says others observed the accident.

Fifteen minutes after the fire department at Youngstown received the alarm the engine was on a flat car bound for this city at the rate of a mile a minute. They plainly saw the election fifty miles from Cleveland.

It is reported that twenty-seven loaded freight cars, belonging to the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & Indianapolis Railway Company, were burned. The heat in the vicinity of the flats is still intense. Several families have been prostrated therefrom.

The fire, although confined to the original area, is still burning fiercely, and will probably continue several days.

Thousands of people are viewing the scene of the fire, which is the greatest in Cleveland's history.

The fire was got under control about midnight and the engines and firemen from abroad were sent home, but the burnt district is still fiercely burning. This covers fully forty acres, a clean sweep having been made of all property lying in the space bounded by the Cuyahoga River, Bee Line tracks and the river bend on the south.

House & Davidson's planing mills and sash and blind factories are a total wreck; loss, $150,000.

Hardly a whole piece of timber is left of Woods, Perry & Co.'s immense lumber yards, covering ten acres. Loss, $225,000.

The losses of other lumber firms are: Potter, Birdsell & Co., $150,000; King & Co., $100,000.

Hubbell & Weston, $30,000; G. C. Stanley, $10,000.

Variety Iron Works, $37,000; Sherwin, Williams & Co., $1,000.

New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio Railway, $500.

Stanley Tallow and Candle Works, beside a great amount of personal property, the value of which can not be learned until the fire is over.

The total loss is estimated at from $1,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Fully seventeen hundred workmen will be thrown out.

The insurance is widely scattered. The insurance men are holding a meeting, but it is impossible to obtain reliable estimates by reason of the magnitude of the fire, which is still raging. No lives were lost but several firemen were badly hurt.

The scene this morning beggars description. Everything between Girard street, on the south, and the river, on the north, extending from Scranton avenue on the east to the Bee Line tracks on the west, are either burnt or burning. Immediately back, on Scranton avenue, stands a huge pile of coal, which is burning with terrible fierceness. It is a red heat. Persons passing near it did so at the expense of the skin on their faces.

Between Carter street and River, bounded on the east by Scranton avenue, and on the west by the Bee Line tracks, where the large lumber yards of C. G. King & Co., Woods, Perry & Co., Potter, Birdsell & Co., are burned clean, not a board is left. All the trains were stopped on the Bee Line. This morning the fire broke out west of the Bee Line tracks in the lumber yards of Hubbell & Weston, and a number of large piles were shot into flames.

Firemen at once concentrated streams on the burning lumber, but could do nothing more than to prevent a spread without extinguishing it. At noon the flames were still burning fiercely, the firemen battling bravely. It is not known what the extent of the latter fire will be.

Mayor Farley was in the midst of the firemen all night with his pants tucked into his boots, his face bespattered with mud, working bravely. The militia ordered out last night to protect property kept the crowd back.

Through the Meas.

GREENVILLE, Texas, Sept. 9.—At Caddo Mill, Isaac McAdams, a farmer, was killed by Thomas Brumley, a neighbor. Sometime since Brumley had a valuable horse stolen. He cast suspicion upon McAdams who demanded an inquiry which resulted in his acquittal. While Deputy Sheriff Smith was standing with Brumley at the latter's gateway Saturday McAdams came up on horseback. Brumley says he merely spoke to him, whereupon McAdams began firing at close range with a pistol. Brumley returned the fire, his first bullet passing through McAdams' head.

Brumley surrendered to Deputy Smith, and both started for town. A few hours after Brumley's arrival about a dozen of McAdams' friends rode in and demanded the surrender of Brumley and Smith. This being refused they swore out a warrant charging Smith with being accessory to the assassination of McAdams. McAdams' friends declared they would return and lynch both Brumley and Smith. The jail is heavily guarded by a posse of citizens, but every one fears the avengers of McAdams will appear, when bloody work must follow. Brumley's statement of the killing is generally discredited.

Arrested for Murder.

CAIRO, Ill., Sept. 9.—About a year ago an old couple named King, man and wife, living near Hickman, Kentucky, alone in an isolated locality, were found one morning brutally murdered in their house, the bodies being terribly bruised and cut. The old people were known to have a large amount of money in the house, and it is thought by those who knew best that the murderers did not get less than $5,000 cash. A reward of $1,700 was offered, and detectives from various cities have been engaged on the case ever since. A Missouri detective named Smith Wednesday arrested one Thomas Cooper, a horse doctor, residing at Union City, and lodged him in Hickman Jail, charged with the crime. At the time several persons were arrested and narrowly escaped lynching, but were enabled to prove themselves innocent.

Mrs. Custer's Narrow Escape.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—A fire causing considerable alarm and excitement occurred early this morning in the Stuyvesant flats, Eighteenth street and Third avenue. Several persons had a very narrow escape of their lives. Among the many occupants of the building were Mrs. George A. Custer, widow of the late General Custer, and Miss Jane Gilder, the well known critic. The loss on building and furniture is estimated at $2,500.

Frost in the Northwest.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 9.—Specials report slight frosts at various points on the Canadian Pacific, Sunday morning. The lowest temperature was 31 above at daylight. A light, drizzling rain set in, averting all possible damage, though under any circumstances the injury would have been light, as harvesting is about over.

China Apologizes to the British Lion for Firing on the Iron Clad Zephyr—A Bitter Complaint Against Stanley.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A dispatch just received from Shanghai states that the Chinese Government has sent an apology to the English Admiral for the recent mistake of the Chinese military authorities at Foo Chow in firing upon the British Iron Clad Zephyr. The Chinese Foreign Minister says he was grieved that such an affair should have happened to a friendly power, and that the Government was willing to indemnify the officer and sailor who was wounded by the fire from the Chinese guns. The British Admiral sent a return note stating he was satisfied with the apology as he had no doubt the firing was the result of ignorance on the part of a petty artillery officer who did not know the difference between the English and French flags.

COMPLAINT AGAINST STANLEY.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—The following passages in the letter from Libreville, which fills a column and a half in the Debats, have created a profound sensation:

"Mr. Stanley and his agents have done their utmost to bring about hostilities with France. In one village M. de Brazza and his companions, passing peacefully and unarmed, were fired at and grossly insulted by Stanley's Zanzibari. The chiefs of stations of the Association not only neglected to punish this act of savage provocation, but actually distributed cartridges to the natives on M. de Brazza's arrival, exclaiming 'that war was about to break out. The members of the French mission have displayed wonderful patience in tolerating these brutal insults without any sign of anger; but M. de Brazza is fully determined to put up with anything rather than let blood be shed and abandon the ideas of a pacific conquest accomplished by persuasion, mildness and righteousness. It is certain that the results that he obtained by these means, which have hitherto been little employed in colonization, are admirable. The fidelity of Makoko and his vassals to our alliance is one of the finest moral triumphs ever achieved in Africa. At the present moment, without firing a shot, France has acquired the two banks of the Congo at the most important point of that river, as all trade routes from the sea converge thither. Mr. Stanley's stations, which are established there, are on French territory. The treaty formerly concluded with Makoko and ratified by the French Parliament has just received a striking consideration from Makoko and his vassals. It assures us a unique and privileged position on the Congo, and it is to be hoped that we shall take care to profit by it."

ARRIVED SAFELY.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 9.—The Czar, Czarina, Vladimir and Grand Grand Dukes Nicholas, Czardimir and George arrived at Warsaw to-day.

A SENSATIONAL DYNAMITE STORY.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The London Times publishes a sensational story concerning the alleged renewal of dynamite plots against the British Crown. According to the Times a constant traffic in dynamite has been organized between conspirators in England and their accomplices in the United States. So successfully has this smuggling in dynamite from America into England been carried on recently that the Times alleges the authorities have been compelled to set up the most extraordinary precautions for the safety of the different members of the royal family. The impression conveyed by the sensational publication is that the dynamiters have been enormously active in secret for some time past; that they have succeeded in collecting in England a vast amount of explosives; that the near future will witness the most violent outbreak of dynamite outrages which has yet occurred in Great Britain; and that the conspirators will direct their principal attacks straight against the throne itself.

The statement of the Times attracted universal attention, but produced no alarm. A reporter repaired to Scotland Yard for the purpose of learning from the best source of information what foundation there was for the story. The official in charge laughed at the publication. He said: "The story deserves no attention at all, unless to be ridiculed. It is true that we maintain a very close system of inspection over all vessels arriving in England from foreign ports. This surveillance has been so complete that we believe it has for a long time made the smuggling of dynamite practically impossible. There has been no occasion recently to improve or extend the watch. Nor has anything arisen to warrant fears that any member of the royal family is now in any special danger from dynamite attacks. Of course all the vigilance in the world can not render dynamite outrages absolutely impossible at any moment. But it is not true that the authorities have had any reason for extraordinary precautions lately, and at present no such measures are in force, nor are any contemplated, no reason that we know of existing therefor."

HAND-TO-HAND ENCOUNTER.

Highwayman Assaults a Stone-Mason, Resulting in the Former's Death.

CULPEPPER, Va., Sept. 9.—A desperate hand-to-hand encounter took place near Oak Shade, in this county, late Saturday night, between Jeff Jolly and a highwayman, in which the latter is believed to have been killed. Jolly is a stone-mason. In returning from his work he was met by a white man on the road, and a demand made at the point of a pistol for his money. With his pocketbook in one hand and a heavy hammer in the other the stone-mason made a desperate effort to defend his life and property. The robber fired at him, but in the hurry missed his victim. Jolly closed with him and fought like a tiger. He finally felled the thief to the ground, and it is believed, killed him by a well directed blow on the head with his heavy hammer. The fight, however, lasted for a quarter of an hour, and but for the fact that the robber's pistol was disabled by a blow from Jolly's hammer he doubtless would have killed his victim and secured his money.

THE GREELY EXPEDITION.

Sergeant Fredericks' Version of the Execution of Private Henry.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 9.—Sergeant Julius R. Fredericks, of the Greely polar expedition, is in the city, the guest of his brother. The attention of Mr. Fredericks was called to the dispatch which charged selfishness on the part of himself and Long, and a determination on their part to live, whatever became of the rest of the party.

"It is a lie from the word go," said Fredericks. "So, too, is the statement that there were two factions in the Greely party. I never saw a party so united and harmonious as were the Greely party. The only man who ever disobeyed an order was shot. This was Henry, as you know. So far as I know," he said, "there is no foundation for the charge that survivors ate the flesh of their dead comrades. It might have been that there was some cannibalism, but if there was it resulted in instant death, for the stomachs of the men were in no condition to take such food. To speak definitely, I myself saw no instance of cannibalism."

As to the shooting of Henry, Fredericks said: "The party became a unit against him, and demanded that Greely should issue a death-warrant, or allow it to proceed without. Greely finally consented, and the order was secretly issued. Now, mind you, Henry was as supple as ever, and if he had known that an order for his death had been issued he would have killed us all, for we were so weak that we could not defend ourselves, and could barely walk with a gun. Three guns were loaded—I can't tell you loaded them—two of them with balls, the other with a blank cartridge. The three were placed on the ground and an equal number of men detailed to take them up for the execution. Brainard, Long and myself were the three. We did not know who loaded the gun with a blank cartridge—nobody knows except the man who loaded the gun. We were then ordered to proceed to the execution. We found Henry down on the coast, and alone, about 150 yards away, in the very act of collecting sealskins which were destined for the subsistence of the entire party. Henry did not know that we were about to kill him, but he knew that he had been warned time and again that he would be killed if he persisted in appropriating the food of the party. We walked to within twenty yards of him and the ranking man said: 'Henry, we are now compelled to carry out our orders.' The order to fire was given and the man dropped dead. There was no missing him at that range, and the aim from each of the two men, whoever they were who carried bullets in their guns were fatal. Henry did not say a word before or after he was shot."

Fredericks says the desire of his soul is to return to the Arctic region, and believes that the first man who sails up the Smith Sound route will reach the pole. The water flows from the pole, and not toward it. There is a polar ocean, but it is not navigable.

"The reason we did not cross the channel in search of relief is that it is like a swift mill-race, full of crushing, grinding ice, twenty-two miles in width, and impassable. It is a lane kept open by the frightful winds, through which the North Pole regions spew out mountains of ice."

A MADRID TRAGEDY.

How the Husband of a Daner Avenge a Slight to His Wife.

MADRID, Sept. 9.—At the rehearsal of the ballet of "Sylvia" in the Opera House here Manager Masar rebuked Senora Vallon, a danseuse, for making a wrong step, saying, "You dance like a chicken." After the performance the husband of the danseuse entered the manager's box and demanded an apology. Senor Masar denied that he had insulted the lady, whereupon the husband plunged a dagger into Masar's heart and he fell dead on the spot.
